ITEMS AT OUR "LOW" PRICES

ON THE COVER

If you've ever wondered about the covers, they're the work of our Editor, Brick Price. The drawings are always in black and white as they go to the printers and may appear a little rough. Once they're printed on colored paper, the roughness disappears.

Some of the covers are composite drawings using existing drawings along with new artwork. These types are the easiest since they require very little time, comparatively speaking. The Henry Ford 100 Dollar bill was an example of this type of effort. Had Brick been required to draw Ford it would have taken days instead of hours to produce a decent looking cover.

What I'm getting at it that if any of you have usable illustrations or are fairly good at producing art, why not share the wealth with the rest of us. Drawings are always interesting and can contribute so much to the appearance of a magazine. Even if the art isn't good enough for the cover, it can still add quality to the interior.
